The World of Wheat By H. G. L. Trrange

"Agriculture in the first place, is not only an art but an important and noble art. It is, as well, a science, which teaches what crops are to be planted in each kind of soil, and what operations are to be carried on, in order that the land may regularly produce the largest crops. Equipped with this knowledge the farmer should aim at two goals, profit and pleasure; the first is material return, and of the second enjoyment."

This remarkable piece of wisdom setting out in memorable words the very heart and soul of agriculture, was written by one of the greatest agriculturists the world has known - Marcus Terentius Varro - Senator of Rome, about 50 B. C., just over 2000 years ago, in his book entitled "On Agriculture."

The pleasure and enjoyment of farming, of which Varro writes, is no doubt that exalted feeling which comes to those who, in their work are striving to excel, who are aiming to achieve the highest possible skill in their craft and who experience such a love and pride in their work that they become veritably inspired with a desire to attain perfection itself.

Fortunate indeed the farmer who has received sufficient material return, and who can experience too the enjoyment of which Varro speaks.

Apparently, the out of town boys find difficulty in getting their girl friends home from the Chinook dance. One certain young man must have forgotten to tell the driver where he lived, as he was seen coming up the east highway about 8 o'clock next morning. Was this an accident or did he want to stay in Cereals?

"Mirrors don't tell lies." So a young man of town tried to tell his girl friend on Tuesday night. It's a good thing that the radio exists to allow such love making to be expressed over its request programmes.

Round About Town

The teachers' convention in Calgary has far-reaching effects. A Starr shone brightly there in the eyes of one of the Chinook boys.

Our local drayman looked rather sleepy Tuesday after returning from Calgary. We are surprised that he didn't come back with his hair waved. We suppose that absence made his heart so fond that he had no time for personal appearance.

Everyone reported a good time at Friday night dance. It seemed to us that everyone had turned the corner from poverty and met prosperity face to face.

We didn't expect the prodigal son to take our warning, of two weeks ago so seriously. The girls were so disappointed to see him so bashfully revealed at the dance.

At one dance she loses a heel. But not being satisfied with that, she causes the loss of a pair of shoes at the next one. The shoes finally landed at Oyen. We are therefore, suspicious that she may have thought that since B. F. had a car, she would have a joy ride anyway.

Did you notice the fatherly aspect many of our citizens take on? Quite an attraction they cause when they take the pretty baby for a daily walk and airing.

The show and Dance had an extremely bad effect on some of the high school girls last week. It will likely be no more social evenings for them for some time to come.

Transient Youth Problem Again

In a recent issue of this column attention was drawn to the plight of that sizeable army of young men wandering up and down the country in vain search for work and, perhaps, in a minority of cases, hunting for relief, when the situation was referred to as a national disgrace, coupled with the suggestion that some provision should be made to give them work and wages.

It was pointed out that there is plenty of work that could be done with profit to the nation and the taxpayers and, in effect, that all that was needed was to connect these transient jobs with this work.

Since that time these suggestions have found confirmation in an article in the November 12 issue of Toronto Saturday Night written by A. J. Elliott, who not only points out the necessity of providing work for these wanderers, instead of allowing them to be made a shuttlecock between the municipalities and the senior governments, but outlines in some detail the work to which they might well be put and the methods that should be adopted in carrying out the plan.

Since Mr. Elliott is the Superintendent of the Toronto Men's Hostel and has had much experience in social work in the United States and Canada his suggestions are not only interesting but carry with them the weight of experience and authority.

Mr. Elliott adopts the viewpoint that the problem instead of being insoluble has a relatively simple answer but if it is to be successful "our theory must be changed from the opinion that the federal government is attempting to control a national liability to the conviction that we are actively engaged in conserving a national asset."

In making this statement it would appear that Mr. Elliott is reaching down to the roots of the problem, for, if these men were regarded as a national asset to be conserved, as they undoubtedly are, it would not be very long before the demand that something be done to give them their rightful place in the economic life of the country, or at least a chance for it, would be sufficiently vociferous to bring forth fruit.

For Unskilled Labor

As was stated before in this column there is plenty of work that can be done with advantage and Mr. Elliott not only confirms this statement in a general way but points out specifically some of the projects that might well be undertaken when he says:

"Grandiose schemes such as the construction of huge public buildings or super-highways demand large numbers of skilled artisans and trained engineers. The country has not a sufficient number of these to fulfill its normal requirements; and the result is merely to put a premium on the services of such workers.

"But the little jobs, such as changing level crossings to grade crossings, providing passable country roads, eliminating the hazards of pedestrians on highways by constructing footpaths; these, as well as such big jobs as reforestation for instance, require a minimum of skilled workmen and a maximum of laborers. From all of them the general public would derive as much benefit in the long run as the unemployed transients who would be directly assisted thereby."

Mr. Elliott suggests that the men be housed in comfortable and attractive camps, avoiding the mistakes of "our last terrible camp experiment", adding the important warning that the men should not be kept in such camps too long but that every effort be made to provide them with a definite program of education and as soon as possible graduate them into permanent work through the employment bureaus scattered across the Dominion. In other words, Mr. Elliott asks for a definitely co-ordinated program of temporary work, education and permanent employment and opportunity for re-establishment as soon as such may be available.

Effect On Morale

While all of this is sane and sound, not the least interesting feature of Mr. Elliott's plan is his recommendation as to remuneration. Pointing out that these men who have lost their municipal rights are offspring of families and relatives who cannot afford to keep them, Mr. Elliott urges that they be paid, while engaged in such public projects, a minimum wage of thirty dollars a month and keep, of which five dollars is to be retained by the men and the balance forwarded to the nearest of kin.

Apart altogether from the economic effect of partially or wholly lifting the relief burden from the taxpayers on the family's account such disposition of a substantial percentage of the wages would have a marked effect on the family's morale "if their income was the earned wages of one of their number, instead of relief.

"As well as the chance to conserve its manpower and lighten the burden of relief that now falls so onerously on municipal taxpayers, not to mention the restoration of morale and self-respect to innumerable borderline and relief-accepting families the nation has still another opportunity to benefit from the policy of work for wages," says Mr. Elliott, "And that is the opportunity to provide education facilities to a group of its citizens who would benefit from such a program and who would eagerly avail themselves of it."

Such a program as that outlined by Mr. Elliott will strike a responsive chord in a good many breasts and will be approved not only by taxpayers but parents and relatives who have seen their young men fare forth in the vain hope of conquering the unemployment ogre and who are now being battered about from pillar to post, with hope dwindling the longer this problem remains ineffectively tackled.

Troubles Increasing

Man Without Country Is Now Man Without A Ship

John Dolanichuk, "the man without a country," is also a man without a ship.

For the United States liner President Roosevelt sailed for Europe without him, refusing to recognize a deportation order issued by the U.S. department of labor.

Dolanichuk rode 17,000 miles on the ship's lines last year as an uninvited guest. His officials refused to accept him for deportation on the grounds it was physically impossible to land him in another country.

Dolanichuk was born in Austrian territory later ceded to Roumania. Immigration officials said he had entered both Canada and the United States illegally, gone to Spain as a volunteer with the government forces, and later stowed away again for the United States.

Courts have tried vainly to straighten out the tangle of his national status. Great Britain, Prussia, Germany, Roumania—among other countries—have refused him entry.

Alberta Oil Possibilities

Should Be In Increasing Demand By British Empire

Alberta oil should be in increased demand by the British Empire because of its high gasoline content. R. A. Brown, J., of Calgary, told the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy convention at Vancouver. Turner Valley, producing more crude than the available market requires, looks to an embargo on oil imports from the United States and expansion of the domestic market through lower freight rates for an increased share of the British market overseas, he said.

Brown said the British Empire now produces only about five per cent. of its crude oil requirements.

He discounted the feasibility of a pipeline west to the Pacific seaboard. Brown expressed belief that as soon as potential production justified a large enough flow of oil, need of downward adjustment of railway freight rates would follow.

Lincoln Was Inventor

Application For Patent For Pontoon Found Among Old Papers

New York has just found an old safe dating back to the middle of the last century. Experts opened it with care, and found inside a number of models and papers. Some of the papers were signed "A. Lincoln, Springfield, Illinois." Investigation revealed that they had been written by the great President Abraham Lincoln himself, and were, in fact, proof of the statesman's leisure time hobby of invention. Among the contents of the safe was an application by Lincoln to patent a pontoon, which, filled with compressed air, would lift vessels "over bars or through shallow water without discharging their cargo."

Milk And Lemonade

Preferred By British Soldiers In India To Liquor

Rudyard Kipling notwithstanding, the modern British soldier in India prefers milk and lemonade to "sterner stuff." Authorities attribute a sharp decrease in sunstroke and heat exhaustion to this preference, but the number of hospital admissions is still high. Of the 50,000 British troops in India, 30,000 annually are admitted to hospital, twice the ratio for troops serving at home. For the 150,000 native soldiers the ratio is 300 per 1,000.

Thinking Is Power

Knowledge No Good Without It States Sir Frederick Banting

Sir Frederick Banting, co-discoverer of insulin and Professor of Medical Research at the University of Toronto, told students of Dalhousie University Medical School in Halifax: "Knowledge alone is not power," he said, "it is thinking that is power. There is a danger of too little thought and too much work. The idea is the most valuable thing in research. Ideas come only to the man who asks himself why, and answers the question for himself."

Under The Evening Lamp

People Used To Study At Home During The Winter

The Fort Arthur News-Chronicle says the long winter evening was once a time when people would settle down in their living rooms, and enter on prolonged courses of study. They drew out big learned books from some library or book club, and were determined that the winter should not pass without some useful culture. Or they borrowed some of the good old-fashioned 1,000-page novels, and set themselves down to prolonged enjoyment of those fascinating but wordy old tales.

To-day people are no longer satisfied to settle down around the fire-side. Modern life keeps us going so fast that we have forgotten how to say "whoa." If there isn't something to do almost every night, the people say they can't stand the boredom.

But the long winter evening under the living room lamp produced a quiet glow for next day's work, and people learned many things they needed to know.

Tribute To Baling Wire

Seems To Be Very Useful In Cases Of Emergency

It's a pity that more attention has not been given to the significance of baling wire. Best sellers have been written about lesser subjects. Without baling wire, how could the farmer have got along so well as he has?

Think of the gates held shut, the sets of harness fastened together and all the other emergency repair jobs made possible by a piece of cast-off baling wire. Nor is the farmer the only one to profit by this source of material. Automobiles, printing presses, coffee grinders, sewing machines and who knows what else are repaired this very day just because a length of baling wire was at hand at the opportune time. Some men even hold up their pants with the stuff.—Crane, Missouri, Chronicle.

Plays For Science

Violinist Tests Instruments To Determine Tonal Effects

The smallest audience in his career listened to a two-hour violin concert by Jascha Heifetz in the physics department laboratory at Harvard University. Before Professor Frederick Saunders and one assistant, the renowned violinist played for the sake of science. By analysis and recording of sound waves, Prof. Saunders hopes to determine whether new, relatively inexpensive instruments, when played by a master, will give the same tone as the priceless violins made by the great centuries ago.

Drama Festivals

Amateur Theatrical Groups Are Now Rehearsing Plays

Amateur theatrical groups in cities and towns across Canada have started rehearsing plays to be presented at regional festivals preceding the Dominion drama festival in London, Ont., next April.

Festival governors are considering appointment of an adjudicator for the regional competitions but have not yet made a choice. Malcolm Morley, English playwright and actor, did the work last year.

Preliminary competitions will start early in January and conclude in mid-March. The season will open in Kentville with the productions from Nova Scotia on Jan. 9 and 10. Prince Edward Island entries will be staged in Charlottetown Jan. 12-13 and the New Brunswick players will hold their festival in Saint John Jan. 16-18.

Dates of western regional festivals have been set for Saskatchewan Feb. 8-11 in Regina; British Columbia, Feb. 15-18 in Victoria, and Alberta, Feb. 22-25 at Edmonton.

Jack was tempted to ask him if he had seen McKenzie Joe. But the very detachment of the man, the look of exquisite agony with which he watched the trepidation of the little ivory ball, clicking against the interstices, bounding out, hesitating, then rolling on again before it should finally sink into its final socket, withheld him. He turned away, while from behind him the call of the crouper blended with the queer, racking voice of Kenning, proclaiming his joy as he clawed for his chips. Jack went on, at last to corner the wandering Florine.

"Listen," he commanded. "Have you seen that partner of mine?"

"Baby," she exclaimed. "I ain't stolen him."

"I didn't say you stole him. I asked if you'd seen him. You helped him out with some liquor, didn't you?"

"Only five crocks," said Florine innocently.

"Only five?" asked Jack, with his hand to his forehead. "Which way did he go?"

Florine pointed to the entire North. Hammond hurried out the door, mumbling to himself. "Have you seen that partner of mine?"

"Baby," she exclaimed. "I ain't stolen him."

"Baby," she exclaimed. "I ain't stolen him."

"I didn't say you stole him. I asked if you'd seen him. You helped him out with some liquor, didn't you?"

"Well, Joe," he announced with simulated gusto, "I've been waiting for you. Where have you been?"

McKenzie Joe looked at him with muddled eyes.

"Go lay an egg," he said succinctly, but still with that inscrutable smile. There was no thickness to the voice, no allusiveness to the tongue—only a suggestion of monotonous indifference. Then, disregarding his partner entirely, he attempted to walk through him to the next room.

Jack stepped aside. At this point in Joe's progress of inebriation, it was best to humor him. Hammond even allowed him to plod to the bar, where methodically he ordered drinks for the house.

Solemnly, but still with that polar-bear smile, McKenzie Joe watched his guests imbibing. Then he signalled the bartender to let the glasses remain on the bar, while, to the whooping encouragement of his watchers, he smashed them, one after another, upon the floor, bowing meanwhile to the applause.

Jack's heart went steadily downward. The next step would be for McKenzie Joe to pick a fight. It never failed.

The noise caused celebrants to ascertain every part of the rambling structure; it even halted the play in the gaming rooms, the players crowding in the doorway. It was just as they began to flood through that McKenzie Joe turned from the bar and his smile vanished.

A queer gleam came into his hither eyes. His fingers widened until they were muscular half arcs. His tremendous shoulders hunched and his round, beaverlike head shot forward. Jack had been cut off by the sudden surge of the gaming room crowd. Desperately he attempted to break through.

"Joe!" he shouted. "Joe! Watch yourself!"

But McKenzie Joe pretended not to hear. The crowd fell back, suddenly silent, leaving in their wake a solitary man, hypnotized by fear, his hands gesturing futilely, a set, lever-stricken smile, his gray lips. It was Bruce Kenning.

"Well, Joe," he said jerkily, "having a good time, eh, Joe?"

"Let me through here!" Hammond shouted. "You fools—let me through! Somebody stop McKenzie. Do you want a man killed?"

HOW YOU CAN Attract MEN

Of course, you have no men friends. If you've let yourself become dull, cross, and nervous. Men like lively, peppy girls—girls with plenty of energy to go places and enjoy life. Don't let love and romance pass you by. Help build up your pep and you, too, should have gay friends.

Here's good advice: Start taking time-proven, reliable Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and note the difference. This famous Compound, made especially for women from wholesome herbs and roots, helps Nature tone up your system and thus soothes jumpy nerves and gives you more pep to really enjoy life.

For over 60 years one woman has told another how to get "smiling" "distress" and "female troubles" disorders with Pinkham's Compound. Let it help YOU.

him backward, momentarily stopping the assault. Then a staggering miner lurched forward.

"Don't jump on a man from behind!" he commanded, attempting to break the younger man's hold. Around the World Annie swept into action.

"Keep out of this!" she shouted and swung a blackjack. The man fell. Instantly a roar sounded from a dozen equally drunken pals; all at once, Hammond found himself surrounded by milling forms and the wildly falling fists of a free-for-all fight.

Desperately Jack held his grasp on his struggling partner. With a feeling of great relief, he saw the tall, conscious Kenning slip from the loosening hold of the prospector, and buffeted by the fighters about him, stagger into the mass of tangle forms.

Shortly afterward, Hammond felt a terrific wrench as McKenzie Joe exerted his full strength and broke free. After that, the room became a vague conglomeration of noise and conflict, above which Annie's shrill voice sounded again and again as her hunting costume torn, her tresses a wreck and her yellow hair streaming, she swung her blackjack and gave blasphemous commands for quiet. Finally the turmoil calmed. The orchestra started again, blaring its loudest. Hammond disengaged himself from the grasp of a 200-pound Swede and looked about him for his partner. McKenzie Joe had disappeared.

Jack Hammond went forth into the bush to search for him, although he knew it was useless. Somewhere in this dense forest of stunted spruce and high-fung, tangled creepers and tangled junipers, McKenzie Joe had gone to his hideout and he was safe. Nevertheless, Hammond kept up the search for the better part of two days. At least here he had freedom from the bars of Kay Joyce.

The story of the fight at Whoopee had gone like a lightning bolt through the town. Beyond that, Bruce Kenning's swollen eyes, his lacerated cheeks and bruised lips had told their story all too plainly to Kay. Now, all her pent-up dislike for McKenzie Joe had surged to the surface. For the first time Jack Hammond found solace away from her. He had found it impossible to answer amicably her vilifications of McKenzie Joe. To Jack's viewpoint, Joe's attack had been the result of brooding, resentful distrust born of no foundations, it is true, but certainly not deserving of the murderous instincts which Kay had attributed to him. The defense, however, had met only a multi-sided barrage, both from the girl and the geologist.

Now, at last, there was a truce. It was the morning of the third day; Jack and the girl stood together near his cabin. Kay had sought him out excitedly, her left hand extended, and in its palm a dozen or more particles of thin gold, the result, she said somewhat jerkily, of the last clean-up. Hammond bent to examine them, only as quickly to turn out of a corner of his eye he had caught sight of an approaching figure. It was McKenzie Joe.

Gaunt, gray-freighted, but sober, he was approaching from Loon creek. Silently they watched him come nearer; finally Jack said, in a voice tensely incoherent, "Hello, Joe."

"Hello," he said briefly and looked at Kay. "Waiting to tell me what you think of me, eh?"

Kay Joyce whitened. She said nothing. Hammond attempted to cover the situation with a laugh. "No. Of course not. She's just had a clean-up down at her claim. She's gotten into pay dirt."

"So?" The older man strode abruptly forward and stared into her cupped hand. "Washed that out of the gravel, eh?"

"Yes." She bit out the word. McKenzie Joe fixed her with his blood-shot eyes.

"The hell you did!" he snapped. "That's snipin' gold!"

Kay flung her hand angrily downward, scattering the gold in deep grass. Her blue eyes gleamed with rage.

"It isn't enough that you should jump on Bruce. Now you include me!"

"I ain't jumping on you," said Joe. "I'm just telling Jack that gold never came from your claim!"

A Happy Province

Vorarlberg in Austria knows how to manage its affairs.

It is the little province in Austria, next door to Bavaria, Switzerland, Liechtenstein, and the Tyrol. Its area is a thousand square miles and its population about 140,000.

Not one great city lifts spires or smokes stacks in the sky. In the little province, thrift and patience have almost reached a climax. Those little towns and tiny villages are filled with factories which spin and weave. Each worker has a field or garden which he tends after hours.

So well do these men work in their shops that Vorarlberg fabrics find their way to Switzerland, France, and the ends of Europe. And so well do they work on their little farms that their cattle are sought as breeding stock in six lands.

These men are neither rich nor crushed with want. The elders are cradled in peace and quietude and millinery is almost unknown. Crime is rare, excreases seldom. There are no nobles, no great landowners. For centuries Vorarlberg has been practically self-governing. It knows how to manage its affairs.

It looks to Switzerland rather than to Vienna. The Vorarlbergers, people say, are like the Swiss. Their whole land is a garden. They have few resources, yet factories abound. They have no home markets, so the world is their market. They have peace, keep their work and have no ragged edges. They are democrats. Their money rings true, their houses are four-squared and spacious, their clothes clean and substantial. They have cash in their pockets and credit in their banks. Their papers are quoted in every land in Europe.

Taking Exercise

Some Good Advice For Those Who Are At Middle Age Or Over

Exercise should be regular and, at middle age, never strenuous. The purpose of exercise is to get the body lightly tired, not overtired. A strenuous game of badminton for a man or woman over 35 years of age, especially after a hard day's work, is slow poison. Any too-vigorous exercise exhausts you nervously and physically.

It is not much fun in connection with doing "setting-up" exercises every morning but they do help to keep you fit without any undue strain on your system. This exercise, in conjunction with walking, golf, skating or other seasonal recreational activity, should certainly suffice for the average person.

Do not over-exercise. In this connection we are reminded of Chauncey Depew who, when asked what kind of exercise he took, answered: "I get my exercise acting as pallbearer to my friends who exercise." Dr. H. H. Harrison in "Health" (September).

Flagstones from the Tower of London, upon which many royal feet have trod during the 8½ centuries the structure has endured, are to form part of the paving in the courtyard of the British Empire building at the New York world's fair 1939.

Motor Development

History Of The Beginning In The Building Of Automobiles

The recent death of Charles Duryea, who started building an automobile in 1891, recalls to the Chicago News the long-unsettled dispute over credit for the invention of the motor car. Three standard encyclopedias show little agreement in their listings of inventors who aided in the development of self-propelled vehicles, the grand total being some 57 names.

Nicholas Cugnot built a steam-propelled carriage in France in 1770. He was followed shortly by Oliver Evans in America and Richard Trevithick in England. As automobiles they had little success; as locomotives these experiments were much more productive. From time to time during a century other steam carriages were tried out on highways. The motor car was a little nearer after the work of Gottlieb Daimler and Karl Benz in Germany with the internal-combustion engine in 1885 and 1886. Narkus and Krebs were other claimants.

Charles Duryea, who was born on a farm near Canton, Ill., built a car in 1891 and ran it on a highway in 1892. One he built the following year is now in the U.S. National Museum, as is one built by Elworth Haynes of Kokomo Ind., in 1894, which is said to be the first one that was practically successful. But there is a long list of disapplicants—Ford, Olds, Winton, King, Maxwell, Apperson, Riker, Glavin, Stanley, White, Franklin and Schlemmer to say nothing of George B. Seldon to whom all automobile manufacturers at one time paid royalties because of his basic patents granted in 1895.

National Art Gallery

Historic Chiswick House in Suburban London To Be Renovated

Chiswick House, childhood home of King George V. and his brothers and sisters, is to be renovated and converted into a national art gallery or museum.

The historic estate, situated on the western fringe of suburban London, was purchased for the public in 1928. At that time it served as the country and town home of the Duke of Devonshire. King George himself sent a liberal contribution to the purchase fund.

There are 60 acres of ground, crisscrossed by paths and a lake 2,000 feet long and 200 feet wide. Chiswick House was first made socially in 1774 by the wife of the fifth Duke of Devonshire. Known as the "Beautiful Duchess Georgiana," the fancies she gave were the talk of the day. She was also an enthusiastic partisan of Charles James Fox and caused quite a furore by selling kisses for votes in the famous "Westminster election."

Adult Education

Especially Important In A Country Like Canada, Says Lord Tweedsmuir

Lord Tweedsmuir told the Canadian Association for Adult Education that adult education is especially important to a country like Canada "with its great distances, its racial and social differences, and its divergent economic conditions."

He provided that common denominator which builds up a national spirit and makes possible national unity.

Addressing the association's annual banquet at Ottawa, the governor-general said civilization is a perpetual balancing of law and individual freedom. "Without rules and restrictions life is impossible and becomes anarchy; with too many restrictions it becomes the next worst thing, bureaucracy."

"If we are to have a secure world we must have the reign of law; but if we are to have a free world that law must be recognized by the citizen as his law—his own because he makes it, accepts it, and realizes its value."

Changed Entire History

A gourd changed the entire history of the South Sea islands. By sighting through holes in a water-filled calabash gourd, ancient Polynesian navigators were able to take readings from the sun and the stars, thus enabling them to roam over the entire South Pacific ocean.

Among the odd names of streets in London are: "Bread and Rolls Street," "Cook and His Stock Street," "Cold Bath Street," and "Pickle-Herring Street."

ACTS FAST TO BRING RELIEF FROM COLDS

This Simple Way Eases Pain and Discomfort and Sore Throat Accompanying
Colds with Amazing Speed

1. To ease pain and discomfort from cold, cough and fever take 2 Aspirin tablets with a glass of water. 2. If throat is raw from cold, cough and fever take 2 Aspirin tablets with a glass of water. . . . gargle.

Just Be Sure You Use "Aspirin" — Do It the Moment You Feel a Cold Coming

The simple way pictured above often brings amazingly fast relief from discomfort and sore throat accompanying colds.

Try It. Then—see your doctor. He probably will tell you to continue with Aspirin—because it acts so fast to relieve discomfort of a cold. And to reduce fever.

This simple way, backed by scientific authority, has largely supplanted the use of strong medicines in easing cold symptoms. Perhaps the easiest, most effective way yet discovered.

Capital and Labor

Labor Entitled To Its Fair Reward, Says Sir Edward Beatty

Capital has a responsibility to try to co-operate with labor to operate railways as efficiently and economically as possible, Sir Edward Beatty told the 21st triennial conference of railroad Young Men's Christian Associations in Toronto.

"If that is to be done by giving labor less than its fair share of the rewards of operation, then it is not being done well," said the president of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Many American railway unions have played "no small part" in establishing a tradition of high standards of character and conduct among workers. Employers also were entitled to share credit for the fact railway workers of North America were "one of the best elements in our citizenship."

"There is no distinction at all between labor and capital," said Sir Edward. "Labor is entitled to its daily earnings. Capital is entitled to its share of the profits of the railway capital and labor to forget the user of railway services. He also has rights, and woe betide us if we forget them."

Preferred The Money

On a recent week end, says Leonard Lyons, in the New York Post, one of the night club owners received an unusual phone call. "I'm bringing the Governor of Kentucky to your place," the caller suggested. "And if you'll see that there's no check, I'll see that you'll be appointed a Kentucky Colonel." "A Kentucky Colonel is the safe owner replied. "I'd rather he pay the check!"

Old Timers Comment

On Heavy Snowfall

Mr. Charyk, at great hazard to life and limb, has prolonged the day in his room, by attaching to the electric light socket, a bulb which disperses daylight.

We understand that during the operation, his pupils formed a veritable fire brigade, half of them supporting the step ladder, the other half with firmly grasped sheets ready to receive him should he precipitate himself from the dizzy height.

Bragg Creek (Special) Although the snow is light and dry, it has gradually piled up to such an extent that old timers say it is the heaviest snowfall of its kind they have seen.
Often during the spring break up months, an 18 to 24 inch fall of yet snow occurs, but it lasts only a few days.

With the exception of an odd magpie and snowbirds, there is no sign of wild life anywhere.
